Unit One: The Role of Money

Why we lack financial knowledge. Communication about money is key. Distinguishing between needs and wants is essential. Honestly evaluate your financial strengths and weaknesses in the areas of knowledge, discipline and courage.

Unit Two: Goal-Setting for Success!

Having a written goal map will increase your success in getting what you want. Be successful by following these steps: (1) Make your goal specific and measurable; (2) Check that your goal is realistic but challenging; (3) Think of possible obstacles to achieving your goal; (4) And think of some solutions to the obstacles. (5) Review your goal map often to measure your progress and add to your map. Three "Essential Goals" we should all share are enough insurance, an emergency fund, and retirement savings. Without these, we may lose everything else. "Set to get," then "let your vision drive your decisions." Set your goals effectively to achieve them and let your goals drive your spending and saving behavior.

Unit Three: Creating a Spending Plan

There are fixed, variable and periodic expenses. It's not a "budget," a spending plan is your plan to spend your money in a way that lets you get what you want! Income and expenses can vary, but if you spend according to an accurate monthly average of your net income and expenses (including your goals), you will be successful. Track spending to discover and eliminate money leaks and review your plan often. Even if drastic action is required, there are always choices. Make a habit of keeping financial records. If you cannot increase your income, see the Fixed Income Financial Tips article on Butterfly's FE Library page.

Unit Four: Using Credit Wisely

Credit is borrowing money for a price. A lower interest rate and/or paying a loan off more quickly will save you money. Before using credit, ask yourself: (1) Can I save the money and avoid using credit; (2) will the thing I am buying on credit will have value after I finish paying for it and; (3) whether this use of credit helps me reach my financial goals. "Save your credit, you won't regret it!" If you don't charge anything you don't already have the money for, you'll be able to pay any credit card bills in full each month to avoid the minimum payment trap. Do the arithmetic on any offer that "sounds" good. Understand the different types of credit and be alert to debt warning signs.

Unit Five: Gaining Control of Your Credit Report

In deciding whether to give you credit, and how much you'll pay for credit, lenders look at three things: (1) Your credit report; (2) your credit score and; (3) the lender's own standards. Credit reports are different from credit scores. Credit reports come mainly from three Credit Reporting Agencies or CRAs. You're entitled to one free credit report per year from each of the three CRAs if you go through www.annualcreditreport.com. Federal law gives you the right to correct, add and remove information in your credit report—Edit your credit! Info from your credit report is what is used to compute your credit score. Credit Scores cost about $20. The most used credit score is the FICO® score from www.myfico.com. There are other companies that can give you reports, but the "big three" CRAs and FICO are the most widely used.

Unit Six: Consumer Skills and Where to Go for Help in a Financial Crises

Advertising, packaging, salespeople and our culture can all influence our spending behavior without our even realizing it. Remember to thoroughly research purchases. Shop before you buy. Delay purchases to create a cooling off period. Comparison shop, try to negotiate, use the power of cash over credit where possible and use your walk away power! Never stop learning about financial matters: the government offers great information that is free. Beware of scams and deceptive practices. If it sounds too good to be true, it generally is. There is no easy or quick way to get rich. There are Consumer Protections laws to protect you. Visit your State's Attorney General's website and the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau www.consumerfinance.gov for more information on scams and consumer protections. To file a complaint easy to navigate instructions and a list of agencies can be found at www.USA.gov/consumer-complaints For links and phone numbers of government offices and nonprofits mentioned in the video, as well as many other useful resources, click on Butterfly's Consumer Resources.
